v.

THE NEW YORK STATE DEPARTMENT OF

SUPPLEMENTAL BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF
PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI

1. In its decision in the instant case, the Court of Appeals affirmed that portion of the District Court's decree requiring that permanent appointments of Correction Sergeants made prior to the development of a new selection procedure be in a ratio of one minority for each three whites until "the combined percentage of Blacks and Hispanics in the ranks of Correction Sergeants (Male) is equal to the combined percentage of Blacks and Hispanics in the ranks of Correction Officers (Male)" (20a, 38a-39a).<sup>1</sup>

On April 19, 1976, at the request of the plaintiffs (petitioners herein), intervenors, and defendant Commissioner of Corrections, the District Court entered an order providing for the implementation of an interim selection procedure, ordering that pursuant to said interim procedure appointments be made to fill all Sergeant positions (with minor exceptions) not now held by permanently appointed Sergeants, and that "[o]f the persons appointed to fill such positions from the interim list at least one-fourth shall be members of the plaintiffs' class until the percentage of Correction Sergeants who are black or Hispanic is equal to the percentage of black or Hispanic Correction Officers serving by permanent appointment as of the date of the administration of [examination number] 34-944." Respondents New York State Civil Service Commission and intervenors Ribeiro and Coons filed Notices of Appeal from said order on May 17 and May 27, 1976 respectively. Said appeals were dismissed on June 8 and June 30, 1976, respectively, for failure to docket the appeals.

Inasmuch as the order of the District Court, which became final after the dismissal of the appeals therefrom, will give petitioners the relief which they were seeking with respect to the appointment of minority Sergeants, the issue raised by the first question of the petition is moot. Petitioners respectfully submit that this Court grant their petition with respect to the first question, and vacate as moot that portion of the judgment of the Court below which reversed the District Court's order providing for promotion by quota following the establishment of a final selection procedure.

2. After petitioners filed their Petition for a Writ of Certiorari, this Court, in Runyon v. McCrary, Nos. 75-62, 75-66, 75-278, and 75-306, 44 U.S.L.W. 5034 (June 25, 1976), rejected petitioners' contention that statutory authorization for an award of attorneys' fees in a case of racial discrimination brought under 42 U.S.C. §1981 may be found in 42 U.S.C. §1988. While, without more, Runyon v. McCrary would concededly require that the Court deny certiorari in the instant case, petitioners urge that, in light of the fact that legislation is about to be brought to a vote in both houses of Congress authorizing the award of attorneys' fees in cases brought under 42 U.S.C. §§1981-1985, this Court defer consideration of this petition.

On June 29, 1976, the Senate Committee on the Judiciary reported out S.2278. This bill, and the report accompanying it, are reprinted in the appendix hereto at pp. 1b-7b.<sup>1</sup> On September 9, 1976, a virtually identical bill, H.R. 15460, was reported out of the House Committee on the Judiciary (8b).

Petitioners' counsel have been advised that S.2278 will be brought to a vote on September 17 and H.R. 15460 will be brought to a vote under a suspension of the rules on September 20. If such legislation is enacted, it will provide precisely the authorization required by Alyeska Pipeline Service v. Wilderness Society, 421 U.S. 240 (1975) and will be applicable to the instant case. Bradley v. Richmond School Board, 415 U.S. 696, 710-724 (1974); Wallace v. House, No. 75-914, 44 U.S.L.W. 3607 (April 25, 1976).<sup>2</sup> Counsel for petitioner will keep the Court informed of the progress of this legislation.

Petitioners pray that the Court defer consideration of this petition until the aforementioned bills are either adopted or rejected.

If this legislation is enacted, petitioners submit that it would be appropriate for this Court to grant the petition, <sup>2</sup> In Wallace v. House, supra, a voting rights case, this Court vacated a judgment denying counsel fees on the ground of lack of statutory authorization and remanded the case to the Court of Appeals for reconsideration in light of P.L. 94-73, a law authorizing counsel fees in voting rights cases which was passed after the Court of Appeals' decision.

vacate that portion of the judgment of the court below reversing the District Court's award of counsel fees, and remand the case to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit for further consideration in light of said legislation. See Wallace v. House, supra.

CIVIL RIGHTS ATTORNEYS' FEES AWARDS ACT

JUNE 29 (legislative day, JUNE 18), 1978.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. TUNNEY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted the following

REPORT

[To accompany S. 2278]

The Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 2278) to amend Revised Statutes section 722 (42 U.S.C. § 1988) to allow a court, in its discretion, to award attorneys' fees to a prevailing party in suits brought to enforce certain civil rights acts, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon and recommends that the bill do pass.

The text of S. 2278 is as follows:

S. 2278

Revised Statutes section 722 (42 U.S.C. Sec. 1988) is amended by adding the following: "In any action or proceeding to enforce a provision of sections 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980 and 1981 of the Revised Statutes, or Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs."

PURPOSE

This amendment to the Civil Rights Act of 1866, Revised Statutes Section 722, gives the Federal courts discretion to award attorneys' fees to prevailing parties in suits brought to enforce the civil rights acts which Congress has passed since 1866. The purpose of this amendment is to remedy anomalous gaps in our civil rights laws created by the United States Supreme Court's recent decision in Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. v. Wilderness Society, 421 U.S. 240 (1975), and to achieve consistency in our civil rights laws.

HISTORY OF THE LEGISLATION

The bill grows out of six days of hearings on legal fees held before the Subcommittee on the Representation of Citizen Interests of this Committee in 1973. There were more than thirty witnesses, including Federal and State public officials, scholars, practicing attorneys from many areas of expertise, and private citizens. Those who did not appear were given the opportunity to submit material for the record, and many did so, including the representatives of the American Bar Association and the Bar Associations of 22 States and the District of Columbia. The hearings, when published, included not only the testimony and exhibits, but numerous statutory provisions, proposed legislation, case reports and scholarly articles.

In 1975, the provisions of S. 2278 were incorporated in a proposed amendment to S. 1279, extending the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

The Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights specifically approved the amendment on June 11, 1975, by a vote of 8-2, and the full Committee favorably reported it on July 18, 1975, as part of S. 1279. Because of time pressure to pass the Voting Rights Amendments, the Senate took action on the House-passed version of the legislation. S. 1279 was not taken up on the Senate floor; hence, the attorneys' fees amendment was never considered.

On July 31, 1975, Senator Tunney introduced S. 2278, which is identical to the amendment to S. 1279 which was reported favorably by this Committee last summer.

Shortly thereafter, similar legislation was introduced in the House of Representatives, including H.R. 9552, which is identical to S. 2278 except for one minor technical difference. The Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties and the Administration of Justice of the House Judiciary Committee has conducted three days of hearings at which the witnesses have generally confirmed the record presented to this Committee in 1973. H.R. 9552, the counterpart of S. 2278, has received widespread support by the witnesses appearing before the House Subcommittee.

STATEMENT

The purpose and effect of S. 2278 are simple—it is designed to allow courts to provide the familiar remedy of reasonable counsel fees to prevailing parties in suits to enforce the civil rights acts which Congress has passed since 1866. S. 2278 follows the language of Titles II and VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000a-3(b) and 2000e-5(k), and section 402 of the Voting Rights Act Amendments of 1975, 42 U.S.C. § 1973l(e). All of these civil rights laws depend heavily upon private enforcement, and fee awards have proved an essential remedy if private citizens are to have a meaningful opportunity to vindicate the important Congressional policies which these laws contain.

In many cases arising under our civil rights laws, the citizen who must sue to enforce the law has little or no money with which to hire a lawyer. If private citizens are to be able to assert their civil rights, and if those who violate the Nation's fundamental laws are not to proceed with impunity, then citizens must have the opportunity to recover what it costs them to vindicate these rights in court.

Congress recognized this need when it made specific provision for such fee shifting in Titles II and VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964:

When a plaintiff brings an action under [Title II] he cannot recover damages. If he obtains an injunction, he does so not for himself alone but also as a "private attorney general," vindicating a policy that Congress considered of the highest priority. If successful plaintiffs were routinely forced to bear their own attorneys' fees, few aggrieved parties would be in a position to advance the public interest by invoking the injunctive powers of the Federal courts. Congress therefore enacted the provision for counsel fees—* * * to encourage individuals injured by racial discrimination to seek judicial relief under Title II." Newman v. Piggie Park Enterprises, Inc., 390 U.S. 400, 402 (1968).

The idea of the "private attorney general" is not a new one, nor are attorneys' fees a new remedy. Congress has commonly authorized attorneys' fees in laws under which "private attorneys general" play a significant role in enforcing our policies. We have, since 1870, authorized fee shifting under more than 50 laws, including, among others, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C. §§ 78i(c) and 78r(a), the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1958, 38 U.S.C. § 1822(b), the Communications Act of 1934, 42 U.S.C. § 206, and the Organized Crime Control Act of 1970, 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c). In cases under these laws, fees are an integral part of the remedy necessary to achieve compliance with our statutory policies. As former Justice Tom Clark found, in a union democracy suit under the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (Landrum-Griffin),

Not to award counsel fees in cases such as this would be tantamount to repealing the Act itself by frustrating its basic purpose. * * * Without counsel fees the grant of Federal jurisdiction is but an empty gesture * * *. Hall v. Cole, 412 U.S. 1 (1973), quoting 462 F. 2d 777, 780-81 (2d Cir. 1972).

The remedy of attorneys' fees has always been recognized as particularly appropriate in the civil rights area, and civil rights and attorneys' fees have always been closely interwoven. In the civil rights area, Congress has instructed the courts to use the broadest and most effective remedies available to achieve the goals of our civil rights laws.<sup>1</sup> The very first attorneys' fee statute was a civil rights law, the Enforcement Act of 1870, 16 Stat. 140, which provided for attorneys' fees in three separate provisions protecting voting rights.<sup>2</sup>

Modern civil rights legislation reflects a heavy reliance on attorneys' fees as well. In 1964, seeking to assure full compliance with the Civil Rights Act of that year, we authorized fee shifting for private suits establishing violations of the public accommodations and equal employment provisions. 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000a-3(b) and 2000e-5(k). Since 1964, every major civil rights law passed by the Congress has included, or has been amended to include, one or more fee provisions.

<sup>1</sup> For example, the Civil Rights Act of 1966 directed Federal courts to "use that combination of Federal law, common law and State law as will be best adapted to the object of the civil rights laws." Brown v. City of Meridian, Mississippi, 736 F. 2d 602, 606 (5th Cir. 1966). See 42 U.S.C. § 1988; Lefton v. City of Hattiesburg, Mississippi, 323 F. 2d 740 (5th Cir. 1964).

E.g., Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, 42 U.S.C. § 3612(c); the Emergency School Aid Act of 1972, 20 U.S.C. § 1617; the Equal Employment Amendments of 1972, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16(b); and the Voting Rights Act Extension of 1975, 42 U.S.C. § 19731(e).

These fee shifting provisions have been successful in enabling vigorous enforcement of modern civil rights legislation, while at the same time limiting the growth of the enforcement bureaucracy. Before May 12, 1975, when the Supreme Court handed down its decision in Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. v. Wilderness Society, 421 U.S. 240 (1975), many lower Federal courts throughout the Nation had drawn the obvious analogy between the Reconstruction Civil Rights Acts and these modern civil rights acts, and, following Congressional recognition in the newer statutes of the "private attorney general" concept, were exercising their traditional equity powers to award attorneys' fees under early civil rights laws as well.<sup>3</sup>

These pre-Alyeska decisions remedied a gap in the specific statutory provisions and restored an important historic remedy for civil rights violations. However, in Alyeska, the United States Supreme Court, while referring to the desirability of fees in a variety of circumstances, ruled that only Congress, and not the courts, could specify which laws were important enough to merit fee shifting under the "private attorney general" theory. The Court expressed the view, in dictum, that the Reconstruction Acts did not contain the necessary congressional authorization. This decision and dictum created anomalous gaps in our civil rights laws whereby awards of fees are, according to Alyeska, suddenly unavailable in the most fundamental civil rights cases. For instance, fees are now authorized in an employment discrimination suit under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, but not in the same suit brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1981, which protects similar rights but involves fewer technical prerequisites to the filing of an action. Fees are allowed in a housing discrimination suit brought under Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, but not in the same suit brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1982, a Reconstruction Act protecting the same rights. Likewise, fees are allowed in a suit under Title II of the 1964 Civil Rights Act challenging discrimination in a private restaurant, but not in suits under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 redressing violations of the Federal Constitution or laws by officials sworn to uphold the laws.

This bill, S. 2278, is an appropriate response to the Alyeska decision. It is limited to cases arising under our civil rights laws, a category of cases in which attorneys fees have been traditionally regarded as appropriate. It remedies gaps in the language of these civil rights laws by providing the specific authorization required by the Court in Alyeska, and makes our civil rights laws consistent.

It is intended that the standards for awarding fees be generally the same as under the fee provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. A party seeking to enforce the rights protected by the statutes covered by S. 2278, if successful, "should ordinarily recover an attorney's fee unless special circumstances would render such an award unjust." Newman v. Piggie Park Enterprises, Inc., 390 U.S. 400, 402 (1968).<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> These civil rights cases are too numerous to cite here. See, e.g., Sims v. Ames 340 F. Supp. 601 (M.D. Ala. 1972), aff'd, 409 U.S. 942 (1972); Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 366 F. Supp. 18 (N.D. Cal. 1973); and cases cited in Alyeska Pipeline, supra, at n. 46. Many of the relevant cases are collected in "Hearings on the Effect of Legal Fees on the Adequacy of Representation Before the Subcomm. on Representation of Citizen Interests of the Senate Comm. on the Judiciary," 93d Cong., 1st sess., pt. III, at pp. 888-1024, and 1060-62.

<sup>4</sup> In the large majority of cases the party or parties seeking to enforce such rights will be the plaintiffs and/or plaintiff-intervenors. However, in the procedural posture of some cases, the parties seeking to enforce such rights may be the defendants and/or defendant-intervenors. See, e.g., Shelley v. Kraemer, 334 U.S. 1 (1948).

Such "private attorneys general" should not be deterred from bringing good faith actions to vindicate the fundamental rights here involved by the prospect of having to pay their opponent's counsel fees should they lose. Richardson v. Hotel Corporation of America, 332 F. Supp. 519 (E.D. La. 1971), aff'd, 468 F.2d 951 (5th Cir. 1972). (A fee award to a defendant's employer, was held unjustified where a claim of racial discrimination, though meritless, was made in good faith.) Such a party, if unsuccessful, could be assessed his opponent's fee only where it is shown that his suit was clearly frivolous, vexatious, or brought for harassment purposes. United States Steel Corp. v. United States, 385 F. Supp. 346 (W.D. Pa. 1974), aff'd, 9 E.P.D. ¶ 10,225 (3d Cir. 1975). This bill thus deters frivolous suits by authorizing an award of attorneys' fees against a party shown to have litigated in "bad faith" under the guise of attempting to enforce the Federal rights created by the statutes listed in S. 2278. Similar standards have been followed not only in the Civil Rights Act of 1964, but in other statutes providing for attorneys' fees. E.g., the Water Pollution Control Act, 1972 U.S. Code Cong. & Adm. News 3747; the Marine Protection Act, Id. at 4249-50; and the Clean Air Act, Senate Report No. 91-1196, 91st Cong., 2d Sess., p. 483 (1970). See also Hutchinson v. William Barry, Inc., 50 F. Supp. 292, 298 (D. Mass. 1943) (Fair Labor Standards Act).

In appropriate circumstances, counsel fees under S. 2278 may be awarded pendente lite. See Bradley v. School Board of the City of Richmond, 416 U.S. 696 (1974). Such awards are especially appropriate where a party has prevailed on an important matter in the course of litigation, even when he ultimately does not prevail on all issues. See Bradley, supra; Mills v. Electric Auto-Lite Co., 396 U.S. 375 (1970). Moreover, for purposes of the award of counsel fees, parties may be considered to have prevailed when they vindicate rights through a consent judgment or without formally obtaining relief. Kopet v. Esquire Realty Co., 523 F.2d 1005 (2d Cir. 1975), and cases cited therein; Parham v. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., 433 F.2d 421 (8th Cir. 1970); Richards v. Griffith Rubber Mills, 300 F. Supp. 338 (D. Ore. 1969); Thomas v. Honeybrook Mines, Inc., 428 F.2d 981 (3d Cir. 1970); Aspira of New York, Inc. v. Board of Education of the City of New York, 65 F.R.D. 541 (S.D.N.Y. 1975).

In several hearings held over a period of years, the Committee has found that fee awards are essential if the Federal statutes to which S. 2278 applies are to be fully enforced.<sup>5</sup> We find that the effects of such fee awards are ancillary and incident to securing compliance with these laws, and that fee awards are an integral part of the remedies necessary to obtain such compliance. Fee awards are therefore provided in cases covered by S. 2278 in accordance with Congress' powers under, inter alia, the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 5. As with cases brought under 20 U.S.C. § 1617, the Emergency School Aid Act of 1972, defendants in these cases are often State or local bodies or State or local officials. In such cases it is intended that the attorneys' fees, like other items of costs,<sup>6</sup> will be collected either directly from the official, in his official capacity,<sup>7</sup> from funds of his agency or under his control, or from the State or local government (whether or not the agency or government is a named party).

<sup>7</sup> Proof that an official had acted in bad faith could also render him liable for fees in his individual capacity, under the traditional bad faith standard recognized by the Supreme Court in Alyeska. See Class v. Norton, 505 F.2d 123 (2d Cir. 1974); Doe v. Podker, 515 F.2d 541 (8th Cir. 1975).

It is intended that the amount of fees awarded under S. 2278 be governed by the same standards which prevail in other types of equally complex Federal litigation, such as antitrust cases and not be reduced because the rights involved may be nonpecuniary in nature. The appropriate standards, see Johnson v. Georgia Highway Express, 488 F. 2d 714 (5th Cir. 1974), are correctly applied in such cases as Stanford Daily v. Zurcher, 64 F.R.D. 680 (N.D. Cal. 1974); Davis v. County of Los Angeles, 8 E.P.D. ¶ 9444 (C.D. Cal. 1974); and Swann v. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Board of Education, 66 F.R.D. 483 (W.D.N.C. 1975). These cases have resulted in fees which are adequate to attract competent counsel, but which do not produce windfalls to attorneys. In computing the fee, counsel for prevailing parties should be paid, as is traditional with attorneys compensated by a fee-paying client, "for all time reasonably expended on a matter." Davis, supra; Stanford Daily, supra, at 684.

This bill creates no startling new remedy—it only meets the technical requirements that the Supreme Court has laid down if the Federal courts are to continue the practice of awarding attorneys' fees which had been going on for years prior to the Court's May decision. It does not change the statutory provisions regarding the protection of civil rights except as it provides the fee awards which are necessary if citizens are to be able to effectively secure compliance with these existing statutes. There are very few provisions in our Federal laws which are self-executing. Enforcement of the laws depends on governmental action and, in some cases, on private action through the courts. If the cost of private enforcement actions becomes too great, there will be no private enforcement. If our civil rights laws are not to become mere hollow pronouncements which the average citizen cannot enforce, we must maintain the traditionally effective remedy of fee shifting in these cases.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE BILL ARE ITALICIZED

REVISED STATUTES § 722, 42 U.S.C. § 1988

"The jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters conferred on the district courts by the provisions of this chapter and Title 18, for the protection of all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and for their vindication, shall be exercised and enforced in conformity with the laws of the United States, so far as such laws are suitable to carry the same into effect; but in all cases where they are not adapted to the object, or are deficient in the provisions necessary to furnish suitable remedies and punish offenses against law, the common law, as modified and changed by the constitution and statutes of the State wherein the court having jurisdiction of such civil or criminal cause is held, so far as the same is not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, shall be extended to and govern the said courts in the trial and disposition of the cause, and, if it is of a criminal nature, in the infliction of punishment on the party found guilty." In any action or proceeding to enforce a provision of sections 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980 and 1981 of the Revised Statutes, or Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs.

COST OF LEGISLATION

The Congressional Budget Office, in a letter dated March 1, 1976, has advised the Judiciary Committee that: "Pursuant to Section 403 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Congressional Budget Office has reviewed S. 2278, a bill to award attorneys' fees to prevailing parties in civil rights suits.

"Based on this review, it appears that no additional costs to the government would be incurred as a result of the enactment of this bill."

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SEPTEMBER 8, 1976

MR. DRINAN (for himself, Mr. KASTENMEIER, Mr. DANIELSON, Mr. BADILLO, Mr. PATTERSON of New York, Mr. RAULSBACK, and Mr. WIGGINS) introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary

A BILL

To allow the awarding of attorney's fees in certain civil rights cases.

1     Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2     tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,
3     That this Act may be cited as "The Civil Rights Attorney's
4     Fees Awards Act of 1976".

5     SEC. 2. That the Revised Statutes section 722 (42
6     U.S.C. 1988) is amended by adding the following: "In
7     any action or proceeding to enforce a provision of sections
8     1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, and 1981 of the Revised Statutes,
9     title IX of Public Law 92-318, or title VI of the Civil Rights
10    Act of 1964, the court, in its discretion, may allow the 11    prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable
12    attorney's fee as part of the costs."
